

GIFTS FOR A DUCHESS.

The Presents Which Have Been Sent to the Duke of Marlborough—Of Pearls Once Worn on the Neck of Catherine of Russia—This is the Gift of the Duke's Mother—Each Pearl a Half Inch in Diameter—Other Costly Gifts.

New York, Nov. 4.—Miss Vanderbilt has already received many of her wedding gifts. Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt has given to her daughter her entire marvelous set of pearls, consisting of one very long string, a yard in length. The pearls are beautiful and evenly matched, and are said to have belonged once to the Empress Catherine of Russia. Each pearl is half an inch in diameter. There is besides a collar of pearls considerably larger than those composing the long string, each pearl alternating with a solitary diamond. Still another necklace of pearls and diamonds in antique gold and enamel setting is a gift from Miss Vanderbilt's aunt, Miss Armida Smith. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr.'s, present to his sister is a superb quarter moon, solidly set with good sized diamonds, a gem which will far outshine the moon at any time. From her brother, Harold, there is a cluster of diamonds, to which is attached a slender crescent of the same beautiful gems, which, though intended for the head, can be worn for a corsage ornament.

A beautiful square cut emerald set in a ring with a diamond on either side is from Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt; a turquoise and diamond necklace, ring from Miss Katherine Duer; a blue enamel watch, set with diamonds and pendant to a true lovers' knot, from Mrs. G. B. Vanderbilt; a pendant, encrusted with diamonds, from Miss May Goetz; a unique pearl brooch, the irregularly shaped pearl suggesting to the artist the body of a swan, the neck and wings being carried out in diamonds, from Mrs. Richard M. Hunt; a ring set with a superb square cut sapphire and two diamonds, from Perry Belmont; and a pair of side combs set with small pearls, from Miss Daisy Post.

One of the duke's gifts is a giraffe of gold, set with diamonds. Mrs. William Astor's gift is a purse of golden mesh, the fastening being circular in shape and set with turquoise and diamonds. R. T. Wilson, Jr., has sent an exquisite vinaigrette of engraved crystal, the stopper set with a large aqua marine, surrounded with small diamonds. Mrs. R. T. Wilson's gift is a pair of solid gold vases, about six inches in height, of Louis Seize design.

There are many beautiful fans. Miss Morton, who is to be a bridesmaid, sent a fine old Spanish fan; Mrs. John H. Davis a tiny one of First Empire style, of white moire, with a design in silver spangles and medallion portrait heads; Mr. and Mrs. William A. Dyer, a more modern one, of exquisite point lace and pearl sticks, with Watteau medallions set in the lace. Two beautiful vases of Watteau and Boucher are from Mrs. Henry T. Sloan and Mrs. H. Winthrop Gray.

Mrs. Vanderbilt has also given her daughter a splendid traveling toilet case, which contains many pieces, each set in dull gold, each receptacle for toilet articles, whether brushes, combs or pins, being of gold.

Some of the other gifts are:

A beautiful silver repousse tray, from the household servants; a silver bonbon box, from Reginald Ronalds; a crystal flask set in gold, from Miss Edith Corse Evans; a Louis XVI. table clock of dark blue enamel, ornamented with Roman garlands and rhinestones, from Miss Cadwalader Evans; a mirror set in silver gilt, from Mrs. Charles Kellogg; a roccoco inkstand, pen and tray, from H. Matland Kersey; a Sevres cup, from Jules Vatable; a silver loving cup, from Mr. and Mrs. John Jacob Astor; a silver repousse plate, from Mrs. Richard Irving; a silver inkstand from J. Frederic Tams; a large silver mounted blotting pad, from Miss Marie Winthrop; a silver miniature frame, from Mrs. L. K. Wilmerding; an antique silver box, oval in shape, from Peter Goetz; a large toilet mirror, set in silver, from Miss Fair, and a pair of antique silver candlesticks from Winthrop Rutherford.

The bride bouquet is now in the hands of Mrs. Vanderbilt's sister, who will preserve the freshness of the flowers until they come into use next Wednesday. The flowers came on the Wednesday, Friday, and were carefully packed in ice. They were picked at Bienville by the duke's orders, and the roses were from bushes which have an ancestry. The bouquet is composed of white and pink roses and orchids. The flowers looked as fresh yesterday as they did the day they were picked. When they reached this city they were made into a huge bouquet, five feet across the top. They have now been separated and the choicest of them will be made into a bouquet for the bride. The others will be divided among the bridesmaids and will probably be cherished as souvenirs. It was somewhat of an experiment, bringing flowers from England to America, but the result showed that with proper care the feat can be accomplished with success.

POLICY OF JAPAN.

Its Attitude Towards Korea Only Construed in One Way. Washington, Nov. 4.—The telegram from the Japanese government to its minister at Washington announces authoritatively the policy of Japan in Korea, which was published yesterday, has created much interest in diplomatic circles. The Japanese minister said very frankly to-day that this announcement of Japan's attitude towards Korea could only be construed in one way, namely, as an indication of the earnest desire of the Japanese government to remove all possible cause for misapprehension upon the subject. "Recent events in Korea," he continued, "have unfortunately given rise to the impression in some quarters that Japan is seeking to exercise exclusive control over that country; in other words, to establish a protectorate. Nothing could be further from the truth than this supposition. In dealing with Korea Japan has but one object, the establishment and maintenance of the independence of the Korean government."

"In holding this purpose the Japanese government is not actuated by any wish to control Korea, or by any motive of purely altruistic benevolence. Her own interests demand that Korea shall be independent and that the Korean government shall be strong enough to maintain order within the kingdom and to protect foreigners residing there. Eighty per cent of Korea's trade is with Japan; the regular lines of communication between Korea and other countries are entirely under Japanese control, while large numbers of Japanese reside in Korea for purposes of business. Through the weak and vacillating policy of the Korean government, largely due formerly to the mischievous influence exerted by Chinese agents, all of these interests were constantly endangered. Internal disorder became the rule rather than the exception in Korea, and at every fresh outbreak it was Japan and her subjects that suffered most. It can be seen from this that Japan had a strong motive entirely different from anything like an ambitious desire to control the political destinies of Korea, in assuming and maintaining the attitude she occupies."

Korean affairs are still, unhappily, in a most chaotic condition, and the best means for improving the affairs of the government and the people are beset by obstacles which seem well nigh insurmountable. Consequently there has been some misunderstanding in Europe and America concerning the real situation in Korea and the true designs of Japan. All such doubt should be removed by the declaration of policy contained in the telegram from our government, which is a clear and succinct statement at the same time a very frank statement of its true designs. The presence of a large force of troops in Korea has, doubtless, been one of the reasons why the impression has gained ground that the Japanese government desires to establish a protectorate."

STRUCK CHAPEL STREET BRIDGE.

While Beating His Way on Top of a Coach of the Boston Express—Three Other Hobbies on Top of the Train—The Injured Man Will Recover.

As the Boston express which left Union depot at 6:45 last evening was pulling up through the cut between Chapel street and Grand avenue last evening the conductor was suddenly startled by seeing a man come down through the top of one of the vestibules. The fellow cried out, "Stop the train; there's a man killed." The train was stopped about half way between the Chapel street and Court street bridges and in under the Chapel street bridge a man was found who was at first thought to be dead, but on investigation was found to be unconscious and badly injured. Attention was then turned to the man who had come down through the vestibule and with him were found two others. They had undoubtedly been trying to steal a ride, so officers were called and the three were taken to the police station, while the injured man was taken to the hospital.

At the police station the men gave their names as Andrew P. McNamara of St. Louis, Edward King and Charles Williams of New York, while they said the injured man was Isaac Mullane of San Francisco. McNamara said that the entire party was trying to beat its way to Boston. Mullane had beaten his way from San Francisco and at St. Louis had been joined by McNamara. Between St. Louis and New York McNamara said they had only paid out a few dollars for car fare, having stolen rides most of the way. At New York they were joined by King and Williams. The entire gang reached this city yesterday afternoon and were advised by some kindred spirit to slide along to Boston by beating their way on the Boston express last evening. This advice they attempted to follow out, with the result above stated. They had all climbed to the top of a coach and McNamara, King and Williams had slid down into the notches in the top of the vestibules, while Mullane remained on top. When the Chapel street bridge was reached McNamara says that he had just raised up and the bridge struck the top of his hat, but did not hurt him. Mullane, however, was not so fortunate and was struck fairly. McNamara says that as Mullane was struck, he cried out "I'm killed."

At the hospital it was found that his injuries consisted of two scalp wounds, a torn ear, and probably a slight concussion of the brain. It is not thought that his injuries are serious. The three taken to the station house will be tried in the city court to-day on the charge of non-payment of fares.
